*ARMS OF THE PELNALA OF CHANTAER:
"VERT, IN A CHIEF ARGENT THREE BULL HEADS GULES, STE.
CHANTAEL OR GARLANDED GREEN AND ARGENT."*

History

The earliest settlement was founded as a hamlet within a clearing of the woods on the eastern bank of the Eryn and was named Kandar by its inhabitants. Due to its naturally mild micro climate, it grew steadily and prospered. During the fourth century TR, a peonian Reslava (mendicant) called Chantael settled down near foot of the hills. She was a competent healer and became popular with the local peasantry, who regularly visited her hermitage in small groups for treatment of their ailments and listening her preaching the lore of the gentle goddess of life. One day, Chantael's hut was found burned and pillaged without a sign of the Reslava. An extended search revealed Chantael's earthly remains, raped and ritually mutilated within the wood. The peasants' woe and grieve was deep, and they interred Chantael's corpse in a grave near her former hermitage. When a group of three agrikan missionaries came to Kandar later that year, rumors accused them of having murdered Chantael and calls for revenge became loud. A mob of enraged peasants followed the missionaries' trail into the wood and captured them within their camp. When they started to lynch them by drowning them in a stream, a load moo was heard and a large golden oxen trotted down to the stream, accompanied by a woman looking like Chantael. Realizing the unearthly gleam of both figures, the peasants drew back, leaving their prisoners back at the stream. Chantael approached the three man with a kind smile, taking their hands and leading them back into the woods, following the golden oxen, where they all suddenly disappeared. Peace and forgiveness came to the hearts of all witnesses.

Realizing what had happened, the peasants started to praise Peoni for her miracle. A shrine was built at that location, which finally became the heart of a new hamlet that was called Maermel. Later, persons visiting Chantael's grave reported of miraculous healings and another shrine was build above the Reslava's grave.

When word of the miracles came to the Sulaplyn (Peonian bishop) at Aleath, three ebasethe were sent to investigate. As the final result, Chantael was canonized within only three years of her martyrdom. A chapel was constructed to replace the older shrine and a hospital run by the Order of the Balm of Joy was added to cope with the increasing stream of pilgrims. Thus, a cloister emerged from the former hermitage.

During the Theocracy of Tekhos, the cloister was ravaged and desecrated by the Morgathians, though the relics of Saint Chantael were saved.

After the fall of the Theocracy, Chantaer was enfeoffed to the Sulaplyn (bishop) by the king who passed the manor back to the Order of the Balm of Joy and personally exorcised and consecrated the new built crypt. Tales of miraculous healings at St. Chantael's grave gave motivation for countless volunteers to support the cloisters' reconstruction, and so the new nunnery soon surpassed its predecessor in size, fame and importance.

Today, Chantaer is the largest clerical estate of the church of Peoni on the Hârnic Isles. It supports not only Chantaer Nunnery, one of Hârn's largest cloisters, but also obtains substantial surpluses that are passed to the Sulaplyn (Bishop) of western Hârn in the nearby city of Aleath.

Still, thousands of Peonians pilgrim to Chantaer year for year from all over western Hârn. They come to either find relieve to physical illnesses or to obtain indulgence from their sins. Most of them come to visit the grave of Ste. Chantael and hold several days of fasting and praying at the temple. Many stay for at last a tenday to donate their labor to the temple and thus to the goddess – for most of them, this is all they can give. Few of the pilgrims pass the „Reslava-kai-Peledaur“ and take on the duty of leaving the cloister as a Reslava (Peonian mendicant).

The cloister receives substantial profits from the pilgrims, first by the labor provides by the ordinary pilgrims, second by the skills of pious craftsmen and third by the generous donations of noble adherents, usually made in kind, but often also in silver.

Government

Chantaer is ruled by the Pelnala (abbess) of Chantaer Nunnery. At the moment, the office is held by Alobia Seben (her brother is Daffyd Seben, Baron of Findumon).

As usual with peonian monasteries, a unit of laranian knights guards the defenseless peonian nuns. The guard is under the command of Sir Hevel of Jocun who acts in

The Pelnala of Chantaer have always been business-minded, a rather strange trait found with Peonian priests. This lead to several disputes with the more traditional members of the church hierarchy, but up to present days, these disputes were always settled in favor of Chantaer due to the cloister's ability to support dozens of poor temples throughout the land and the church's need to support its subdued adherents in Rethem.

The present Pelnala, Alobia of Rivaller, strongly supports the petition to create a western Hârnic Primacy. If the Council of the Pelclunia grants the petition, Chantaer is among the first of candidates for the new Primate's official seat. Though, the untraditional manner to operate the church estate business-like, might give an interesting point to the discussion whom to appoint to the office of western Hârnic Primate.

It is interesting, that all three Peonian church estates lie within several leagues. Duseda, the second nunnery of the Balm of Joy, is known for its strict traditional Peonian theology. Forute, centered within the wilderness of the western Kandian woodland and lead by the male Irreproachable Order, is known for its monks' skill in colonization and its latent conflict with the feudal system by supporting runaway serfs and criminals.

charge to the Reblena (commander) of Flaru and consists of three Melana (laranian knights) and 7 Meken (laranian soldiers). This guard also assists the Pelnala in the enforcement of law and order. Four yeoman and the militia complete the military forces of Chantaer.

The peonian temples within the hamlets play an important role in daily life, as the priestesses take over the major parts of the responsibilities of the traditional tenant offices. They decide what and where to plant and graze. The reeve acts as a kind of spokesman for all serfs. His advice is usually heard, but not seldom ignored. There is a beadle in each hamlet, who assists the local ebasethe in the enforcement of his/ her orders.

This practice had resulted in occasionally rebellions during the first decades of the abbey, but since then, the peonians' management has resulted in a rather good and secure situation – harvests are above average and famines are seldom – for the tenants and is now fairly accepted.

Economics

Chantaer is parted into three settlements: Chantaer Nunnery and two hamlets, Kandar and Maermel. Chantaer is the political and economic center of the fief. Kandar hamlet, centered in the agricultural lands and seat of the majority of free craftsmen, is also an important economic factor. Finally, Maermel hamlet, located near the edge of the eastern woods, is a base for hunting and forestry.

regularly found near the extensive orchards of Chantaer; the apiarists have a rich harvest of wax and honey. The first is used within the nunnery and sold in large quantities, the latter is almost completely used for conservation and brewing. The nunnery's medicinal garden is a source of valuable drugs and treated herbs and prepared healing potions are sent to other peonian temples.

Agriculture, Fishing, Forestry

Nearly all work throughout the fief is planned and overseen by the peonian priestesses or acolytes. Due to this policy, the infrastructure of Chantaer is excellent: The ways, bridges, hedges and fences are held in constant repair; provisions are kept relatively secure from pests and in sufficient quantities; transports are organized and carried out by bonded teamsters. Most of the nunnery's priests and acolytes work on the fields, the orchards and gardens, others work in the hospital or the workshops. They are living examples for the local peasantry.

The lush pastures in the eastern hills are used to graze the nunnery's sheep.

As there is no major inshore water throughout the fief, fishery is limited to minor streams and ponds.

As usual, the surrounding forests are used to graze pigs and to harvest wood for construction, tools and fuel. The nunnery's Lerovana (Mistress of Healing) and her acolytes regularly search the surroundings for medicinal and esoteric plants.

The nuns' expertise and the mild climate at the foot of the hills allow to grow sensitive fruits and vegetables. Chantaer is famed for the cultivation of fruits, especially apples, pears and peaches. Since their transport is problematically, these crops must be conserved to achieve good prices on the far off markets. This is done in the nunnery by each hamlet's residential clergy and by a freemaster salter. Beehives are

Crafts

Chantaer is famed for its apple wine and for distilling one of Hârn's best alcoholic spirits, an aged apple brandy called „Chantaer“. The recipe of the production is jealously guarded by Chantaer's Cellerars, two Ebasethe who are dedicated to brewing and the production of wines, brandies and vinegar. A bonded innkeeper acts as an intermediate in selling the beverages.

A charcoaler operates his business from Maermel and meets the demands of the local craftsmen and the nunnery's distillery. He sells the surpluses of his production to roaming merchants and craftsmen of nearby fiefs.

In the late summer and autumn the salter at Kandar is busy with pickling vegetables and fruit, throughout the rest of the year, he produces a mild cheese.

Two bonded clothiers oversee the production of linen and wool cloth within the nunnery's workshops.

The hideworker at Maermel treats hides and pelts and produces all demanded leather wares.

Two woodcrafters (each one free and bonded master) meet as well the population's usual demands, as the nunnery's special demand for kegs, barrels and hogsheads for the shipment of the abbey's liquid products.

The local metalsmith strongly benefits from selling holy symbols and pilgrim's badges to the pilgrims.

The abbey's steeds are cared for by a bonded ostler.

There is an old dispute with the Millers' Guild, as the guild has repeatedly petitioned the Pelnala to sell the abbey mill to the Millers' Guild, but the Pelnala has yet refused this to keep independent of the guild and using the service of a bonded miller. The guild has not only pressed the

Religion

Besides the abbey, there is a peonian temple with at least an ebasethe and one to three acolytes in each hamlet.

A single chapel of Larani is located within the laranian Guard House within the abbey.

miller, but also tried to convince the Sulaplyn (bishop) of Aleath to interfere, but without success. Since the nunnery is strongly guarded by knights of the Checkered Shield, the Millers' have yet not dared to seize the grindstones, as they occasionally did elsewhere in western Hârn.

Trade

Though it is five leagues to the nearest road, there is a relative large amount of traffic to and from Chantaer. Pilgrims travel from far off by foot to see the temple's relics and painted windows, sick are driven by the hope for cure in the hospital and devoted peonians seek to stay within the abbey as Esolani (novices) or in desire to celebrate the Reslava-kai Peledaur and become an Reslava (mendicant).

The abbey transports large amounts of its surpluses on own wagons and carts to the temples and markets of Aleath and other settlements. They also directly support other nearby temples in kind. Merchants travel to Chantaer to obtain the famous Chantaer brandy, fruit wines and pickles. The abbey is in demand of ink, paper and parchment; the crafts need salt and raw metals.

The inn at Kandar caters to both, the pilgrims and the traders.

Taxes

MERCHET: 6%
HERIOT: best animal of the deceased

The worship of Morgath, Naveh and Agrik is prohibited and offenders will – theoretically – be sentenced to death. The worship of Halea, Ilvir and Sarajin is strongly discouraged. The omnipresence of Peonian priestesses and Laranian knights throughout the manor makes it problematical to practice illegal religions unnoticed.

The Abbey

All NSC-Stats are provided in an separated appendix.

An asterix (*) indicates members of Chantaer's residential clans, members of other important (esp. noble) clans are indicated by their clan's holdings in [square brackets].

The priory

The priory is run in a building attached to the northern wing of the temple. The priory's rooms on the ground floor are a small office, a conference room and an archive. The Pelnala (high priestess/ abbess) Alobia Seben [Findumon] is assisted by a secretary. The most important internal sections (hospital, archives, seminary, distillery) are lead by their own officials. The more economic decisions are made by the priory with regard to the Avasana's advice. Several competent Ebasethe manage the abbey's fields, orchards, pastures and woods. Others control the Esolani's (acolytes') work within the abbey's workshops.

- Priory: Revniina of Dimitel (secretary to the Pelnala)
- Workshops: Anama of Hunvele [Elvan Manor] (clothier, chandlers), Navenda of Tadeain (scriptorium, woodcarvers, artisans), Ereama of Myrndron* (mill, waterworks, bakery, kitchen)
- Agriculture: Biefua of Hevas (orchards, apiaries), Sanidia of Eskiort (fields), Eraama of Meehol* (stables, pastures and woods)

Pelnala Alobia Seben is quite an educated and progressive woman. She shares the Baron of Findumon's (being her brother) interest in sheep breeding. Each spring, she joins her brother visiting the chantry of the Guild of Arcane Lore at Pindela, dedicated to study of sheep and wool production, to share ideas and knowledge.

The Archive and Treasury

The office of the Avasana (mistress of archives and treasures) is held by Erlama of Udazart. She is not only responsible for the abbey's most valuable treasure – the relics of Ste. Chantael, valuable scripts, additional relics and treasures – but also for the financial affairs of the abbey. The abbey obtains large surpluses – more than 150 £ per annum – of which one third is reinvested, while two thirds are passed over to the Sulaplyn (bishop) of Aleath. Small parts of the nunnery's profits are stored in cash or in valuable ressources

Seminary

Femeanone of Likir* is the abbey's Solana (mistress of acolytes). She maintains a strict discipline among the novices and assigns them them to the single mistresses, usually for a complete month. She is also responsible for the temple school. The temple school is divided into two classes, a primary class, where the Esolani (acolytes) are taught in basic techniques as reading, writing, mathematics and peonian doctrine, and a kind of seminary, where advanced Esolani are prepared for a clerical life. Here, they learn the higher Peonian doctrine and philosophy by lectures and disputations; they might specialize in certain crafts and arts; all of them are taught in Peonian rituals, preaching and other pastoral skills.

- Templeschool: Navaem of Ledais*, Tanefua of Rebeer

Hospital

The abbey's hospital is led by the Lerovana (mistress of healing), Sanoua of Keron. She administrates two Ebasethe who maintain the medicinal gardens and the apothecary and two Ebasethe who act as physicians. Several Esolani (acolytes) work within the medicinal gardens, others nurse the patients and assist to the physicians. The hospital also acts as a hostel for pilgrims and several Esolani tend for these guests under the Lerovana's command.

- Apothecaries: Tivrauna of Ridazol, Revlavia of Barayn [Incella Manor],
- Physicians: Revtuama of Hamitel*, Danaea of Teidan

Cellar and distillery

Chantaer Abbey is famed for its alcoholic products. The recipes are well guarded secrets, only known to the high celleress, Lanmaola of Ledik, and her deputy, Filriem of Teder.

Kandar

General Description

Kandar is the fief's primal settlement. The Chantaer-Windfeld road is nearby (675 meters to the west), and many pilgrims cross the village on their way to Maermel (which lies 2.5 km to the east) and back. In addition to that kind of travellers, teamsters and merchants having business with the nunnery, come by and may stay overnight. That makes Kandar is a more busy place than one would expect for a village of its size. Its position allows for an own inn, in addition to the more common woodcrafters', salter's, and timberwright's workshops.

The Nunnery

The nunnery is enclosed by a 9-12 feet high stone wall. The enclosure can be divided into four main complexes: the temple eastern quarter with its dormitories, the kit-

vided into four main complexes: the temple eastern quarter with its dormitories, the kitchen, refectories, a small garden and the scriptorium; the economic courtyard in the north-south-axis with the guardhouse, priory/guesthouse, stables, shed, workshops, graineries, mill and distillery; and the western quarter with the hospital and an extensive park.

The nunnery is flanked by the medicinal gardens in the west, and a meadow for the horses in the north. The eastern approach is hindered by a steep drop of more than 10 feet.

[A] TEMPLE OF PEONI. The TEMPLE [A1] is an impressive stone building, with an 60' dome supported by eight pillars encircling the central altar. The room is illuminated by by nine large windows with rich and colorful glass paintings, set in the three abses, to the north, east and south. Spiral staircases lead up to the CHOIR LOFT above the western part of the nave and down to the CRYPT with the relics of Ste. Chantael. An door in the northern apse leads to the sacristy. The office of the Avasana (mistress of archives and treasures) is more important than in most other peonian temples and is held by Erlama of Udazart. She is not only responsible for the abbey's most valuable treasure – the relics of Ste. Chantael, valuable scripts, additional relics and treasures, but also for the financial affairs of the abbey. Small parts of the nunnery's profits are stored in cash or in valuable resources such as metals or precious stones, within the abbey's treasury and used as a current reserve. The Avasana's work within the archives and treasury is assisted by Ebasethe Linriola of Theaot.

[B] DORMITORY, KITCHEN AND REFECTORY. The building has four stories: the cellar is used to hold stocks for the kitchen, the second floor is entirely dedicated to CELLS for the nuns and the third floor provides three large DORMITORIES for acolytes and pilgrims. The ground floor is described in detail: The KITCHEN [B1] caters the hole nunnery, including nuns, guards, guests, and patients of the hospital. Two large fireplaces with giant cauldrons are used for brewing, roasting and cooking, two ovens for baking and frying. The kitchen is connected to the nunnery's freshwater-supply- and sewer-system. A trapdoor and a spiral staircase provide direct access to the storage and cooling cellars below. The kitchen's chef is Ebasethe Ereama of Myrndron, who also oversees the maintenance of the waterworks and the mill. The NUNS' REFECTORY [B2] is reserved for the meals of the priestesses and acolytes. Meals are taken in silence, while a nun reads from the order's statutes or holy scripts. The smaller GUESTS' REFECTORY [B3] is dedicated to pilgrims/guests who stay for a longer time, but do not take on as acolytes. Meals should be taken in silence while listening to the readings from the holy scripts, but is not as harsh enforced as in the nuns' refectory. The LAVATORY [B4] and BATH [B5] are connected to the nunnery's freshwater- and sewer-system. The „Reslava-kai-Peledaur“, the Mendicants' Portal, passes the Nunnery's wall. Peonians who become Reslavas leave the nunnery by this gate to begin their new life as a wandering priests.

[C] SCRIPTORIUM AND LIBRARY. This four-storied building houses the main part of the nunnery's ARCHIVES and LIBRARY in the vaulted cellar which connects to the SCRIPTORIUM [C1] on the groundfloor. On the second floor, a smaller part of the library is kept. The third floor (ΑΤΤΙΚ) is used to hold stocks of parchment, vellum and ink. The scriptorium is lead by Ebasethe Navenda of Tadeain, who is also responsible for those acolytes who work as woodcarvers or artisans.

[D] PRIORY. This later addition provides no cellar. On the groundfloor, the OFFICE [D1] is used for rather secular book-keeping and the Pelanla's correspondence. It is overseen by Revniina of Dimitel, the secretary to the Pelanla. Adjoining, a small CONFERENCE CHAMBER [D2] is used by the Pelnala to receive guests of higher rank. The taxrolls are kept in the priory's ARCHIVE [D3]. The second floor provides ACCOMODATION for noble guests, the attic on the third floor is used to store valuable STOCKS.

[E] LOBBY, CHAPEL, TEMPLE SCHOOL, CONFESSION CELLS, SACRISTY. The cellar below the lobby is accessible from the crypt and holds the TREASURY. The TEMPLE LOBBY [E1] is completely vaulted and illuminated by four windows in the western wall. The eight pillars and vault's ribs are heavily carved with floral motives. The CONFESSION CELLS [E2] are frequently used for private confessions and prayers of pilgrims. The four northern cells provide statues of Peoni and kneeling banks, while the four southern cells are outfitted with two seats (one for the confessor and one for a priest). The SACRISTY [E3] is used by priests to prepare services held either in the chapel or main temple. The CHAPEL [E5] is mainly used for silent prayers and private services of the nuns. The TEMPLE SCHOOL [E4] is used for lessons in elementary skills as literacy as well as for advanced lectures on Peonian divinity. The abbey's Solana (mistress of acolytes) is Fe-meanone of Likir. She maintains a strict discipline among the novices and assigns them to the single mastresses, usually for a complete month. She is also responsible for the temple school. The temple school is divided into two classes, a primary class, where the Esolani (acolytes) are taught in basic techniques as reading, writing, mathematics and peonian doctrine, and a kind of seminary, where advanced Esolani are prepared for a clerical life. Here, they learn the higher Peonian doctrine and philosophy by lectures and disputations; they might specialize in certain crafts and arts; all of them are taught in Peonian rituals, preaching and other pastoral skills. The Solana is assisted by Ebasethes Navaem of Ledais and Tanefua of Rebeer in the operation of the templeschool.

[F] STABLES. On the northern part of the ground floor, the building houses the nunnery's SHED [F1] for waggons, carts and larger agricultural tools. The southern part is a STABLE [F2] for the draught- and ridinghorses. The second floor is a HAYLOFT and houses a bonded ostler, his family and apprentice. The building is regularly inspected by Ebasethe Sanidia of Eskiot and Ebasethe Eraama of Meehol, who are responsible for the nunnery's agricultural operations.

[G] HOSPITAL. The abbey's hospital is lead by the Lerovana (mistress of healing), Sanoua of Keron. She administers two Ebasethe who maintain the medicinal gardens and the apothecary and two Ebasethe who act as physicians. Several Esolani (acolytes) work within the medicinal gardens, others nurse the patients and assist to the physicians. The hospital also acts as a hostel for pilgrims and several Esolani tend for these guests under the Lerovana's command.

The hospital is a simple single-story daub-and-whattle building erected adjoining to the nunnery's enclosure wall. The TREATMENT ROOM [G1] is used for surgery by the Lerovana herself or the two physicians, Revtuama of Hamitel and Danaea of Teidan. The room is also used to care for problematic patients. The BATHROOM [G2] and the massage ROOM [G3] are used for balneotherapeutic treatments, while the LAVATORY [G4] assures basic hygienic conditions (two compartments, one for each gender). The patients are accomodated separated by gender (WOMEN'S QUARTER [G5], MEN'S QUARTER [G6]). Each quarter is heated by a fireplace or brazier. The APOTHECARY [G6], lead by the nunnery's apothecaries Ebasethe Tivrauna of Ridazol and Ebasethe Revlavia of Barayn, is used to prepare all medicines used in the treatment of the hospital's patients, as well as simplica for the export, primarily medicinal herbs shipped to nearby peonian temples and hospitals or sold for silver to apothecaries. The equipment is excellent by hârníc standards: there are presses to extract juices and oils from plants and fruit, various distillery apparats are used to extract essences and waters, mortars and handmills to grind substances. The shelf holds hundreds of labeled and sealed pots and glasses containing most of all known simplica used in Lythian medicine. The neighbored STORAGE ROOM [G7] holds racks to dry medicinal herbs harvested in the medicinal gardens, which can be directly accessed by the door in the outer wall. The bed may be used by the apothecary or physician-on-duty.

[H] WORKSHOPS. A two-story daub-and-whattle-building is erected above the stone-vaulted WINE CELLARS (connected to the cellars below [i]). The SMITHY [H1] can be used by various craftsmen or artisans who stay during their pilgrimage at the nunnery, but is also used as a chandlers' workshop. The COOPER'S WORKSHOP [H2] is operated by a bonded woodcrafter and his apprentices, who look for the wine barrels in use and also make new ones. [All the craftsmen live on the attic above their workshops.] The CLOTHIER'S WORKSHOP [H3] consists of rooms for spinning, weaving (with four looms), sewing and the preparation of the wool. Raw wool and textiles are stored in the attic above this rooms. Together with the DYER'S WORKSHOP [H4], they are operated by two bonded clothiers, their four journeymen and six apprentices. The nunnery's clothiers' and chandlers' workshops are overseen by Ebasethe Anama of Hunvele.

[I] BARN, PRESS AND DISTILLERY. Chantaer Abbey is famed for its alcoholic products. The recipes are well guarded secrets, only known to the high celleress, Lanmaola of Ledik, and her deputy, Ebasethe Filriem of Teder. Within the large PRESSES [I1], juice is pressed from the fruits harvested in the nunnery's orchards – mainly apples. The juice is filled in large barrels and stored within the cellard below. Natural yeasts initiate the fermentation and when this process stops, the apple wine is further processed within the DISTILLERY [I3]. Here, the cider is distilled twice by heating the cider in large copper vessels and collecting the condensed vapours in cooled copper pots. The distillate is filled into oak-barrels and stored in the CELLAR to mature for at least 7 years, before it is sold as the famed "Chantaer" apple-brandy. The cellar extends below the court between buildings [H] and [I]. Access to the distillery and maturing cellar is restricted to the high celleress, her deputy and the bonded innkeeper, who resides in [I2]. The innkeepers' main task is to brew beer and ale for the nunnery's consumption – this is done within the kitchen – and legitimating the sale of the produced beverages (cider, apple wine and brandy). The attic is used as a HAYLOFT. The barn is overseen by Ebasthes Biefua of Hevas (who oversees the orchards) and Sanidia of Eskiot (responsible for the fields).

[J] GUARD HOUSE. This stone building houses the Iaranian guard, consisting of three Melana (knights) and seven Meken (common soldiers) of the Order of the Lady of the Chequered Shield. The MESS [J1] is used by both, commoners and nobles. On the groundfloor are the quarters for the common soldiers, on the second floor those for the knights. The adjoining STABLE [J2] is exclusively used for the steeds of the guard.

[K] GATEHOUSE. The gate is open during daylight and closed by night. It is permanently guarded by two of the Iaranian soldiers. There is a GUARD-ROOM in the eastern room, while the western serves as a STOREROOM.

[L] GRANARIES. Eleven graneries hold enough grain to supply the manor for two years – for both food and seedings. The granaries are to the responsibility of Ebasethe Sanidia of Eskiot.

[M] OVERSHOT WATER MILL. The nunnery has its own double-mill. The gears are found in the BASEMENT [M1], they power the two small grindstones on the second floor. One is used to grind grain, the other to press oil from nuts and linseed. The mill is operated by a bonded miller, a rather unusual case, as mills are usually owned by the Millers' Guild and operated by freemasters. The miller lives in a CHAMBER [M2] in the basement of the mill.

[N] WATERWORKS [not on interior map]. A small weir diverts fresh water from the stream into leaden pipe-line, running below the way into the nunnery, where it is distributed to several wells (supplied buildings: B, G, H, I). The sewers dewater all these buildings from waste and are permanently washed by the overflowing fresh water.

[O] BAPTISTERY. The baptistery is an open baldachin with carved pillars supporting an wooden roof. It is used during the ceremonies whenever someone is baptized. After the confession within the baptistery, the priest and the person to be baptized descend the stairs into the water of the NUNNERY'S POND.
