History

Karada's Placer is the name given to the rich tin ore deposits in the banks of Karada's Stream, a tributary to the River Edin. They owe their existence to the erosion of the granite foundations of Mount Zael, just to the south. The cassiterite is washed out mainly during thaw and transported into the plain, where the pebbles come to rest, especially on the gliding banks of the slight meanderers of the stream.

The deposits had been worked for centuries in small streamworks successively following the small river upstream, when the local brotherhood (Miners' Guild) constructed a fortified guildhall and a central stannery in midst of the 6th century TR and began to enforce the metal syndicate in the usual way. Independent streamworkers and smelters were forced to enter the guild, serve as cheap workers or leave the place.

The mine prospered and a small hamlet developed around the guildhall. In 677 TR, the guild put plans into action to increase the mine's production and started construction of an additional, modern stannery near the old one. The improved smelting technology was to enable the guild to rework the old slag heaps. The complex was finished in 679 TR and wailing and production started that same year.

Government

The settlement is governed by the Miners' Guild, who has rented the mine from the Kandian Crown for one tenth of the gross income (this is nearly 20% of the metal value), but not less than 20 £ per year. The Guild Council is responsible for justice and public order.

Its momentary consists of three mine officers: the Guildmaster (representative and economics), the Master of the Stream (operation of the streamworks, payments), and the Master Stanner (operation of the stanneries).

Four mercenaries (all medium foot) enforce the Guild Council's orders, guard the mines and transports, and patrol the surrounding area.

Economy

Mining

Karada's Placer is one of only three Kandian tin mines. Tin is an essential metal, for it is used to make bronze. The both stanneries of Karada's Placer produce about 19,000 pounds of good tin per year. Nearly all residents are working in or for the mines and smelteries.

Agriculture, Fishing and Forestry

Most miners' families cultivate at least some vegetable in their gardens and feed some pigs, sheep or goats. Some families grow cereals and other fruits on the fields northwest of the hamlet. The Ebasethe plat to plant an orchard.

Most wood in the surrounding area has been cut and fired in the stanneries, leaving open land. Since the ways to the remaining wood get longer, the Guild Council is about to elect a Woodward and enact a forestry act.

Crafts

The Miners' Guild dominates the profile of crafts at Karada's Placer. There are four master miners, 13 colliers (journeymen) and 7 miner apprentices. An unguilded miner works the heaps of the stanneries and streamworks to find small amounts of ore and tin. Additionally, the usual mining related crafts can be found:

A miller who maintains and operates the stamping mills, a metalsmith for maintenance of the mining tools, a charcoaler to provide fuel for the stanneries, an ostler providing pack and draught animals, and an innkeeper for a meal or drink.

Trade

The Miners' Guild maintains the metal syndicate, that is it buys all metal produced. Once a month, the marked tin ingots are transported to the market of Edino and get offered and sold to interested merchants or the Sheriff.

As most residents spend their time on washing or smelting, food cannot be grown in sufficient quantities and must be imported from Paku or Edino. Peddlers regularly visit the mine to sell needful things to the residents.

Taxes and Fees

The miners pay all fees to the Miners' Guild. They are payable in kind (ore or metal). One tenth of the gross income is used to pay the royalty to the Kandian Crown. The local craftsmen pay usual license fees to the Miners' Guild.

Taxes are not levied, as mines are tax exempt.

BROTHERHOOD'S FUND:	5% of gross income (at least 1d/tenday)
CLAIM FEE:	20% of gross income
SMELTING PRIVILEGE:	30% of gross income
PICKING LICENSE:	20% of gross income

Religion

The Miners' Guild has few interest in control of the religious practices of its members. To avoid conflicts with the Royal Kandian politics, open adherents of the dark cults will be advised to leave the mine.

The Miners' Guild has erected a chapel to Peoni and sponsors a benefice for an Ebasethe to meet the members' spiritual needs. Prayers are celebrated twice a day at dawn and sunset.

Map Key/ Residents

1 MINERS' GUILD HALL
 The walled complex consists of an fortified two-story mainbuilding and a large outbuilding. The main building houses the mine officers and the central warehouse, where tin bars are marked and stored until exported via Edino. The outbuilding provides space for central workshops, a magazine and the barracks for the guild's four mercenaries (all medium foot). (Guildmaster: ffmf) (Master of the Stream: ff) (Mercenaries: mmmf)

2 PEONIAN CHAPEL – EBASETHE CANIOL OF UBOREL (M, 43)
 The chapel was erected on expends of the Miners' Guild, who also pay's for the Ebasethe's upkeep. The Chapel provides room for about 60 worshippers and contains a valuable frescos depicting the Legend of Owin, the miners' Peonian patron. The churchyard serves as the village's cementary and is adjoined by a small medicinal garden. Ebasethe Caniol was ordained at Forute Manastery in 702 TR and is an excellent colonist. Though his medical skills are moderate, he has saved several persons' life. Due to his practical attitude, Caniol is polpular with most miners: He instructs those not capable of working in the mines to grow crops on the nearby fields. His newest project is to plant an orchard just north of the village.

3 THE GOLDEN PEBBLE – TAVERN & OSTLER
 Size: 5 Quality: 3 Prices: high
 The tavern is run by master innkeeper Gariol of Huvos (m, 56). He is assisted by his oldest son Jarlo (27) who will inherit the franchise, his daughter-in-law Dela (19) and two apprentices: Gloin (m, 12) and Porel (f, 17). Gariol makes large profits serving drinks to thirsty miners and catering for the guild officers and mercenaries' meals at the Guild's Hall. Gariol's partner, master ostler Uriel of Jadedz (41), breeds mules and cart horses for the miners' demands. Uriel is assisted by two apprentices, Namu of Ladu (m, 19) and his daughter Glora (16). His wife Clare (37) cares for the cottage and their sons Jaro (13) and Farin (8).

 Lokir (49) worked as a collier in the streamworks for many years. He is well respected by all miners and has thus been elected as the Guild Elder for several times. The main task of this office is to manage the Brotherhood's Fund (the guild's social insurance). He has close connections to several physicians, apothecaries and priests, who will treat casualties of work accidents and occupational diseases.

17 OLD STANNERY
MASTER SMELTER (MFFMFFFF)

This is the original site of the first stannery at Karada's Placer. The ore gets sorted in the south eastern building and is then crushed in the stamping mill, which is driven by an undershot wheel. The smelting is done in furnaces at the north eastern building. The large plastered place is mainly used to store fuel, aggregates and ore.

Master Miller Tibeden of Tohl (m, 37) Acknowledged Bastard, Siblingrank; 2nd eldest M [M*] Estrangement: Popular Clanhead; Father/Mother, very pious, medium, attends almost all services in the chapel. Relative is Miller in Dyrisa.

18 METALSMITH
ISEHTAN OF LOATTE (M, 37)

(fmmffm) Relative is metalsmith at Edino.

19 CHARCOALER
DERVRI OF GALADOST (MFMFFMM)

Dervri (48) is a halfblood Gozyda from Minous Forest. His mother was outcast from her tribe when she got pregnant after being raped. She fled to Iben's Lode mine, where she got the second wife of a charcoaler working for the Miners' Guild. He was raised as his stepfather's third son and began an apprenticeship with the age of 14. He is an excellent woodsman and after only 4 years as a journeyman, he was granted with a franchise at Karada's Placer. He married a miner's daughter who gave birth to three sons and two daughters.

20 NEW STANNERY
MASTER STANNER (MMMMFFFFMF)

The New Stannery is traditionally operated by the actual Master Stanner. The complex is surrounded by a 5'-wall of fieldstones. The ore gets graded and washed in the sorting building and crushed at the stamping mill. The mill is powered by two 9' waterwheels. After the crushing, the ore is graded again. The resulting substrate is processed in the shaft furnaces in the remaining two buildings and the tin is cast into moulds to form ingots of 20 pounds each.

To obtain sufficient water to drive the two wheels, Karada's Stream was partially diverted into a canal half a mile upstream. The water then reaches the stannery by way of an aqueduct, a small canal partly on top of an earthen dam, partly on a wooden lattice.
